

ORIGINS OF THE ST. ROCCO FEAST

Peterstown's annual festival honoring St. Rocco, which ended in 1988, grew to be the largest in Union County. It was so spectacular that, after 20 years, it still elicits vivid memories in those who attended. The Feast had very humble roots. It originated in 1930 through the hard work and devotion of Vincenzo Gogliardo.

Vincenzo inaugurated the annual festival in front of his home on 532 Fourth Avenue in the Peterstown section of Elizabeth, NJ. The event moved to Spencer Street and grew into a three-day celebration. The affair was always conducted on the weekend following the Feast Day of St. Rocco on August 16. Gogliardo settled in Peterstown in 1924. Born in 1870, he was originally from the Italian town of Savoia DiLucania. The anniversary of St. Rocco's birth has always been remembered with a festival there and Vincenzo brought the tradition with him to America.

St. Rocco was born of French nobility in 1340A.D. He showed a great devotion to God and the Blessed Mother in his youth and was left an orphan at an early age. After living with his uncle, St. Rocco distributed his wealth and took a vow of poverty before heading to Rome. At this time Italy was suffering through a plague. It was noted at the time that St. Rocco was attributed with curing many afflicted people through prayer and by blessing them. His life took a turn toward despair when he contracted the disease himself and was banished from the city to live in a cave. Near death and with an open sore on his leg he sustained life with the help of the dog of a nearby nobleman who would bring St. Rocco food. The nobleman eventually found the Saint and nourished him back to health in his castle.

St. Rocco traveled through Italy for a few years before returning to his hometown in France. Unrecognizable in his present state, St. Rocco was jailed and accused of being a spy. Upon his dying, his cell was illuminated by a blue light radiating from his body and a spiritual voice was also heard proclaiming St. Rocco would be immortalized in heaven. It wasn't until his captors discovered a birthmark in the shape of a cross on his chest that they realized his true identity. With his dying breath he revealed to the governor that he was his nephew. Many miracles were attributed to St. Rocco even after his death. His body lays in a glass tomb in the Church of San Rocco in Venice, Italy.

There are many structures throughout Italy that memorialize St. Rocco. The most spectacular is that of the church, built in the sixteenth century, which sits at the highest point of Savoia DiLucania, a village built on a rock overlooking the River Sele.

St. Rocco is revered as the protector against the plague and all contagious diseases. His image is depicted with the sore on his leg exposed and with the life saving dog by his side. Gogliardo built a chapel in his home with a shrine of St. Rocco visible from the street. The statue is still perched in the groundfloor window overlooking Fourth Avenue.

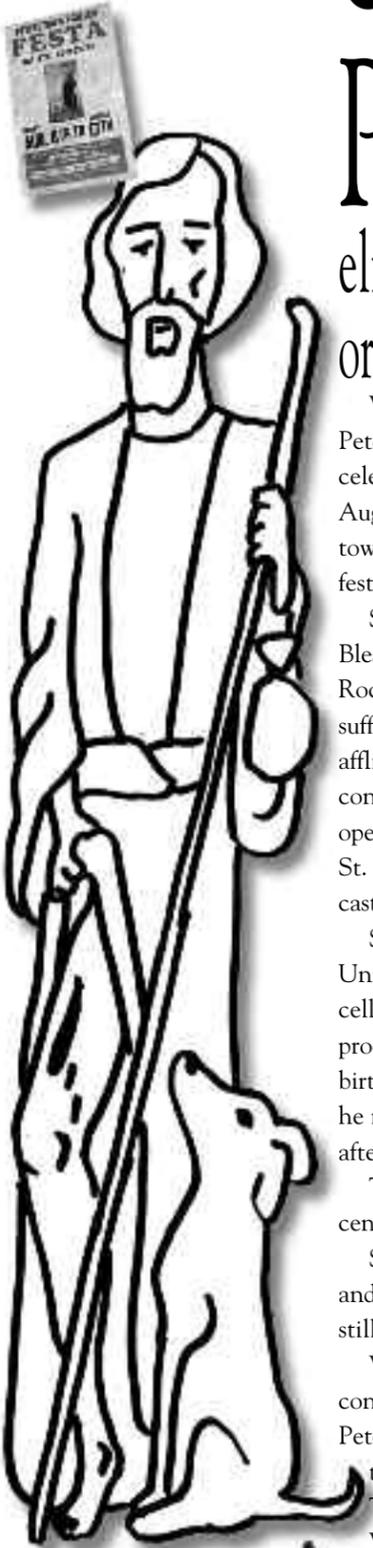

Vincenzo's devotion to the Saint energized him to host the feast and raise funds in St. Rocco's honor. He would walk on his quest to gather contributions from businesses and organizations. It was not uncommon for him to walk thirty to forty miles in a day, starting from his home in Peterstown and going as far as Newark, NJ, or New Providence and beyond. Vincenzo organized a procession where the statue would be carried through the streets of Peterstown so donations can be pinned to a sash. An Italian band led the march followed by children and townfolk. The money he raised would be donated to St. Elizabeth Hospital Chapel.

Vincenzo passed away in 1956. After fifteen years plans to resurrect the feast began by a newly formed organization called the American Italian Cultural Society of Union County. After two years of being held in Warinanco Park in Roselle, NJ, the feast was moved back home to Peterstown, to O'Brian Field, better known as the School 3 playground. It was expanded to ten days, with food vendors lining both sides of South Seventh Street, Second and Third Avenues. Amusement rides claimed the ball field and a stage sat up the hill in left field.

The St. Rocco's Feast was a source of pride for the Italian American community. It showcased the richness of the culture while entertaining thousands.

It has been 20 years since the Feast went dormant again but it still resonates in the hearts and minds of everyone who passed through. It is one of those experiences that the older generation laments that their children are missing out on.

President's Message

The St. Rocco's Feast was a showcase for everything that was great about Peterstown.

First there were the people, thousands would pack the playground and surrounding streets for ten days. You would have the feeling that you knew each one. Everyone there was either related to someone from the neighborhood or was a friend of a friend.

Then there was the food. The food offered at the typical fair is usually greasy and low grade, but not at our feast. Most vendors were from the neighborhood and offered home made Italian specialties. There was no skimping on the portions or the quality.

The third highlight was the entertainment. It was constant day and night for ten days. Again mostly it was local talent, singing dancing and just having a good time. There many reasons why the feast ended. Lack of pride was not one of them.

Thank you and God bless.

John Sacco, President

Joe,

Thanks for all the work you put into the Around About Peterstown newspaper. I always look forward to reading it. Since I moved to Florida last year from NJ, it's like being in the old neighborhood. I remember your dad being with my dad, Vito Colicchio Sr, at Jimmy Malta's store, across the street from St. Anthony's. Those were the days.

Best regards,
 Vito Colicchio, Jr

Dear Joe,

Again I am writing to you to tell you how much I enjoyed your article on the reopening of Nugent's Tavern in the May 08 issue of the newspaper.

I am a former resident of Elizabeth, for nearly 12 years I have been a resident of Florida. I remember Nugent's very well. Joe JR was a year ahead of me in Blessed Sacrament School, and Frankie was a few years behind me. It was a favorite watering hole for my father and his brother. Many the time they took me there as a young fellow to watch the Friday Night Fights, then called Gillette Cavalcade of Sports. My father would get me a coke and a bowl of pretzels and I would be in seventh heaven. At that time TV was in its infancy and Nugent's was the only tavern around that had one.

There were also no stools at the bar. You stood, but that was no problem. There were times that it was so crowded you couldn't fall down. You were shoulder to shoulder.

My father used to remark that Nugent's spilled more on the bar than the average tavern sold. There were no pourers on the bottles. All the bartenders were Irish, and from Ireland. I think, at that time, there was one named Jr. who was not Irish. A good friend of my father tended bar there for many a year, his name was Jim Neary. At that time if you bought two beers, the third was on the house.

I had two very Irish uncles, from Ireland, who lived in NY and did not drive. They would come over in the subway. Take the tubes to Newark and then a # 12 bus to the corner of North and Newark Avenue. Many a time they would get off a block before that so they could stop in Nugent's to quench the thirst, after all they came all the way from the Bronx. They would leave their wives and children waiting outside while they went in. Knowing the third was on the house, they sometimes stayed a little too long, but that is another story.

I want to tell you how much I enjoy your paper it brings back a bit of nostalgia, and my son always picks up a copy and sends it down to me. Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,
 Jack Joyce

Hi Joe.

My cousins both had fathers who were raised in Elizabeth. My one uncle, Daniel DiFabio, lived down by the old movie theater on Elizabeth Avenue with his parents and sister, Betty. My other cousin's dad, Joseph Girgus, lived on Grand Street. If you want to get in touch with some old timers, Joe's brother, Mike Girgus, is alive and well in Clark, NJ. Mike and his sister, Helen, are in their 80's now and can talk about "old-time" Elizabeth.

Mike's sister-in-law, Frances and her husband, Arthur, lived over by Cherry St. Frances owned Fran's Antiques on Elizabeth Avenue by the Route 1 bridge.

My partner, Tom Shaver, lived on Grove St, not too far in from Grand St. We saw that you had friends of ours in your paper, Oscar Petraglia and Biagio Acito.

Good times!! As we say down here in FL.

Good luck if you talk to them!

Dear Joe,

Just wanted to thank you for the great article in the June/July 08 issue about our band Tattoo Rose. You captured the magic and the feeling of those years very accurately. It was a special time for all, especially for us playing the music. I think I can speak for all that were involved, that we wouldn't trade it for anything in the world. It molded many of us into what we are today. The memories brought a smile to my face as well as a tear to my eye. I'd like to share something that I had written over the winter as I sat reminiscing about those very days of fun and music.and it goes like this...

THE BIG TIME

I got the itch to be up on stage
 Think I was barely thirteen
 Some local boys were playin' the school dance
 It was the coolest thing I'd ever seen
 It wasn't long till I got an old pair of sticks
 And learned how to keep the beat
 Guess Mom and Dad put up with the noise
 'Cause it kept me off the street
 Some of the band boys dreamed of glory
 They talked about fortune and fame
 I just enjoyed the songs, day to day
 Wasn't playin' no rock-n-roll game

Well, I never hit the big time
 But man that's alright with me
 'Cause I wouldn't trade all the fun I've had
 And those dynamite memories
 I just keep on playin' the music
 Like I have year after year
 That's all I ever really wanted
 And it feels just fine right here

Traveled up and down the East Coast,
 Givin' them a damn good show
 On a big ol' stage, under big bright lights
 They love it everywhere we go
 You see, it's all about the music
 Play it strong and sing it loud
 Always give them the best you got
 'Cause you never know who's in the crowd
 Haven't seen no record contract
 But brother, there's no regrets
 Just enjoy every time you get to play
 'Cause this may be as good as it gets

Warmed up the crowd for the Big Boss
 Yeah, I've had my moments you see Felt real good right next to Mr. Brown
 Whole Lotta' Shakin' hands with Jerry Lee

Still got the itch to be on stage
 That drive and desire remains
 It's something that I can't control my friend
 'Cause it's runnin' all through my veins

No, I never hit he big time
 But man that's alright with me
 'Cause I wouldn't trade all the fun I've had
 And those dynamite memories
 I just keep playin' the music
 Like I have year after year
 That's all I ever really wanted
 And it feels just fine right here
 Yeah! It feels just fine right here !!!

Thanks again Joe. Nice job!
 And people: "Don't ever stop rockin' !!!"
 God bless !

Editor's Opinion

everybody has one - this is mine - by Joe Renna

All changes that happen in society are explained as being a result of progress, and though I am a big proponent of development, I don't agree that all change is good. Changes that improve our health and safety are obviously universally accepted as good. But changes that may fall outside of necessity may have undesirable side effects and should be avoided.

Every culture is developed though what the society needs to survive and prosper. Cultures are dynamic and adapt to changes. All go through changes and all lose pieces along the way. Speaking about the Italian American background that I experienced in the Peterstown section of Elizabeth, NJ, I must say that I miss the ways of the past.

Life styles that were once honed from necessity are now a product of choice. For instance, poverty created the reason for many things that were common for living in Peterstown. Ability to find decent work was the catalyst for many immigrants settling in the Burg. Life in a multi-family house shared by branches of the family were common. It was almost a communal existence where each neighbor had an interest in watching each other's children.

It is rare that someone has that relationship today, not only with their neighbors but with their own family members. You can say that it is progress that allows individuals to own their own home and to afford baby sitters, nannies and domestic help, but there is grave consequences to the breakdown of the traditional family structure this causes.

The things we attribute to culture like family values, the foods we eat, the jobs we work at, and the way we worship were once inaugurated into our life at birth. Today they have become the product of choice.

This is really the phenomena of those of us who are second generation Americans. Our parents had many more choices in life compared to their parents who had few to none. Relatively speaking I had 100% freedom to do with my life whatever I wanted.

I try to hold on to the life I grew up in. After seeing the alternatives I am firm in my belief that there was no better way to live. I am very happy to see that the same choice has been made by many of my contemporaries who also grew up in Peterstown.

It helps to have a spouse whose core values are the same. The choice for my wife Tina to be a stay-at-home mom was without hesitation. I love her for that. She does draw a few lines though. Even though she does every other chore in the house, I have to clean up after the dog. 🐕

RICHARD DOMINICK

Vincenzo Gogliardo, subject of the Around About Peterstown's August 08 cover story, has a great grandson who many people may recognize as television producer extrodienier Richard Dominick. Richard's mother is Margaret who is the daughter of Marie DiMaio, nee Gogliardo, daughter of Vincent.

Rich's fame came as the executive producer of "The Jerry Springer Show", which is in its seventeenth season. He started his career as the artistic director of the New Jersey Theater. He also honed his writing and acting chops as part of a comedy troupe.

His writing career became most creative when he became a reporter for the weekly World News, where he reported on stories such as "Toaster Possessed by the Devil" and "Howdy Dowdy Dummy Comes Alive and Saves Drowning Boy." He made seven appearances on the David Letterman show to discuss his stories.

His unique brand of journalism was perfect preparation for working on the Springer show, though topics on Springer were much more bizarre than Rich was used to. He continued to write for notables like Jay Leno, The national Lampoon and Cracked Magazine. He was once on assignment fro Penthouse Magazine traveling the United States in search of Elvis.

When asked to explain the Jerry Springer Show, Rich quipped. "If you want to save the whales, call Oprah. If you're dating a whale, call us."

Richard is also currently the executive producer for The Steve Wilkos Show, a Springer Show spin-off. 🐕

OLD TIMERS CLUB IS SIMPLY THAT

Most social clubs can distinguish themselves by a particular attribute or purpose. For the old Timers Democratic Club it is difficult to define what criteria is used for membership. Its history is a bit vague and open to interpretation. Many of the original members have passed away but there is a core of men who still frequent the clubhouse on 553 Third Avenue in the Peterstown section of Elizabeth, NJ.

Members can loosely trace the club's lineage back to the Original Mantano's, a club that started in the early 1900's that used to meet a few blocks away, on Third Avenue near Cleveland Auto and Tire Center. Some say the ties are tighter with the Rocky Stango's Club, which splintered from the Original Mantanos and met on South 5th Street in the 1960's.

The Old Timers have been on Third Avenue about 20 years. The clubhouse walls are filled with the decades worth of photos from the archives of both older clubs. The charter for the Original Mantano Club is stowed away somewhere.

For the most part the octogenarians who meet to play cards and watch sports on the television have little interest in the formalities which got them together. Basically they have done what comes natural in a community where friends for over 80 years still hang out together. It has been that way for their parents and grand parents.

Typical Peterstown. 🍷🎲

CEREMONIES RENEW MEMORIES OF 9/11 VICTIMS

The Peterstown section of Elizabeth, NJ is just ten miles from ground zero. The world trade center towers were in view when traveling north on Rts. 1 & 9 or the Turnpike. They were an inviting landmark when going into the city. The tragedy of 9/11 touched everyone's life. It had to be especially tougher for anyone living in the metropolitan area. Not that sorrow was not felt by every American across the country but the physical attachment to New York and personal relationships to people who worked in the centers are an every day reminder of the loss suffered by people who live close by.

As the seventh anniversary approaches municipalities are planning memorial services. So many towns in the vicinity of the attack experienced the loss of residents. The shock is still felt by neighbors and friends. Memorial services have become annual events that show support for mourners and reassurance to all that American ideals of freedom and our way of life has not been altered.

Immortalizing those killed in the terrorist attacks of 9/11 reenforces the fact that the real threat of terrorism is to innocent people and ensure that it is not forgotten. No matter how the war is presented in the media this reality must not be ignored.

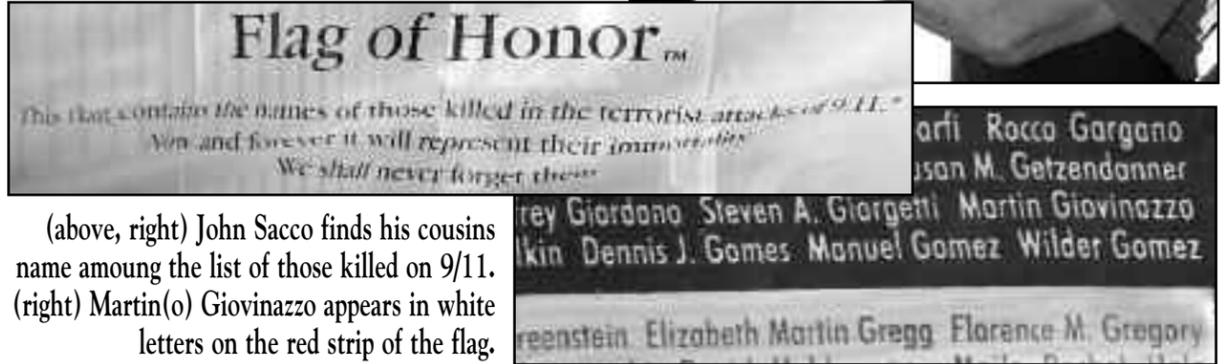

FLAG OF HONOR HANGS IN SACCO'S

The Flag of Honor contains the names of all those that perished in the World Trade Towers, the Pentagon, United flights 175 and 93 and American flights 11 and 77. The flag has special significance to John Sacco who owns a butcher shop in Peterstown, because it includes the name of his cousin Martino Giovinazzo.

Martino, who lived in Staten Island, was working as an electrician for a subcontractor to the Port Authority. He was one floor above the level of impact when the first plan hit the towers.

John received the flag from his nephew Joey Aguillo who is a fireman in Naples Florida. Joey was visiting friends who were firemen in New York. He came across the flag while visiting ground zero and thought that it was a tribute to those who died that his Uncle John would appreciate. John hung it in the window of his shop.

FRANK KRINGLE WAS ONCE STATE'S GOLF CHAMP

Golf legends are very seldom associated with Elizabeth, NJ, especially in the 1920's when the country club sport was reserved for people of certain financial means and a certain sort of breeding. It was in this environment that Frank Crincoli started playing the game and, against the odds, and against the grain, became state champion.

Frank's achievements alone are legendary but what makes them most fascinating was that he was self-taught. Frank was one of six children of Mike and Louise Crincoli, immigrants from Valata Italy, living on Palmer Street in the Peterstown section of Elizabeth. Frank started out working as a plumber out of the union hall.

Frank's intro to golf was working as a caddie at the Suburban Country Club in Union, NJ. Frank would tell the story of while carrying clubs for hire as a small boy someone gave him a rusty old 2 iron. He would swing that club every chance he had while waiting for his next job. After hours he would sneak out on the course to play. He even putted with the club. Throughout his career, the 2 iron would be his "pay off club".

Frank, professionally known as Frank Kringle, made his way into the professional ranks by pure determination. He was known for his insatiable desire to practice. He practiced enough to get the attention of local pros. Amazingly he never played as an amateur and used the professional tournaments to find his way.

He was hired as an assistant to Ben Parola at Sunnyfield Golf Club in Linden, NJ and succeeded him in 1929. He was the pro at Sunnyfield for almost 20 years.

For a while Frank Kringle defined New Jersey Golf. He won the state Pro-Pro title twice and the Pro-Amateur Championship once. In 1945 Frank won the New Jersey Open Championship at Crestmont County Club, from a field of 64 golfers. Frank credited his old 2 iron as the key to his winning the open.

The event capped an amazing year of golf that grossed Frank $2,000 in prize money, making him the number one pro golfer in North Jersey for the season. He finished third behind Sam Snead at the Richmond Open after leading the field for 27 holes. He also tied Denny Shule in the Tropical Open but lost in a playoff.

Frank Kringle played most of his golf against the leading pros in the country before the PGA came into existence. His proudest moment was also in 1945, when he qualified for the national PGA championship, one of only two New Jerseyans to do so.

After Sunnyfield folded, Frank spent two years as a playing pro in New Jersey's Glen Ridge Country Club before taking the position as pro for the Oxford Country Club in Chicopee Falls, Massachusetts. Along the way Frank won the Connecticut PGA crown.

He spent 11 years as pro at the country club, which was, renamed Crestview. It was with great emotion that Frank announced that his son Frank Kringle, Jr., better known as Fran, would replace him as pro at Crestview. With his father being the first, Fran would be the second professional in the 21-year history of the club. Fran, who was 29 at the time, was his dad's assistant for eight years. Fran is currently the pro at Blandford Country Club in Blandford Mass.

Frank played in many small tournaments, mostly pro-am, serious but very enjoyable. His accomplishments are well remembered by anyone who played with him. He hit a nine hole 30 once at Oxford. One of his chief rivals, Henry Bontempo once shot a 64 at Springfield County Club only to lose to Frank's 63.

Frank shot his age on several occasions. Most noteworthy was at the age of 68, when he shot a 68 to win the Western Mass. PGA Chapter championship at Greenfield. Amazingly, he also shot a 73 at the age of 75.

Mainly, Frank's legacy will be that of an instructor. He invented gadgets for teaching golf. He also quite progressively studied film and photos to devise his theories on the gold swing. He was known up and down the east coast and no one ever had a bad word to say about him.

Frank was a humble guy. He would go out of his way to help anyone he could, from free lessons to the shirt off his back. He was a fine dresser and a consummate club professional. He passed away in 1994 at the age of 91. It was the end of an era for many old pros.

ST. ANTHONY'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL CLASS OF '65 WANTS TO REUNITE

A baker's dozen of grammar school classmates met at Costa's Restaurant in Roselle Park to discuss the task of getting the entire class together for a reunion. Since the committee is about one third of the class already, reaching out to the rest should be a cinch.

Specifics for the reunion have yet to be determined but the search stage has begun.

Members of the class can make things easy by calling Debbie Steele at 908-245-6801 or email her at dharris@comcast.net and leaving contact information.

FOND MEMORIES OF FRANK MERLO

The cover story about Frank Merlo in the June 08 issue of Around About Peterstown inspired many family members to share memories of Frank. Life for the Merlos at 316 and 318 John Street was always lively. Michael Merlo, the patriarch of the family operated a fish store from the first floor of the building and the family lived in the rest of the house.

According to Frank's niece, Josephine (Merlo)

DePetris, the level of activity around the house was high and only heightened when Frank came home to visit with theater folk from New York City.

It was a treat for the family but even a bigger treat for the guests. There was nothing better than Frank's mother Sophia's cooking. Even more, Tennessee Williams would also bring along his shirts that had to be washed and ironed, claiming that only Sophia did a better job than any laundry in the city.

It was obvious that Frank's family gets so much pleasure reminiscing, but they also are proud of what Frank has accomplished. His nephew, Joe DeLeo, explained how Frank left Jefferson High School early at the age of 16 and forged his mother's name in order to fight in World War II. Frank received a Purple Heart when he got wounded in hand-to-hand combat at Guadalcanal. He was also awarded the Air Medal.

Jacqueline (Merlo) Demaio described Frank's funeral as a spectacular event. Josephine said, "It was an event made for the movies." There were stars from both stage and screen. Her most vivid memory was that of Marlon Brando arriving on a motorcycle dressed in all black. The eulogy delivered by Tennessee was extremely heartfelt. ❧

HE WAS A MAN OF HONOR

Eulogy for Frank Merlo written and delivered by Tennessee Williams, September 24, 1963, St. Ignatius of Loyola Church, New York City

He had a clearly defined code of behavior which nothing in life or death could make him alter. His character was as strongly and distinctively cut as the Sicilian features of his face. A friend of Frank Merlo's would have to learn his nature as one learns certain inalterable, empirical truths such as 'I have to turn this way and then that way and then back this way again to get home from such and such a locality'. The way would not change. It could not be changed. And when you had learned it, you knew that it was right. In some persons such an inalterable character might be irritating. In the case of Frank it was, on the contrary, a source of unfailing reassurance as a beacon of light in a harbor.

He had no on-stage part in the theatre, he didn't act for it or write for it. But for more than fifteen years he was a vital part of it. He loved people in the theatre and he knew their names, first and last names, and a star meant no more to him than a player who had just a walk-on. He knew the first and last names of the men on the light-board, the stage-manager, the prop-men, and the stage door-man.

He had a unique capacity for knowing and liking people, and all he demanded of them for his understanding and liking was a decent honesty in them, and he had a unique gift for drawing out of them the best that they had to give.

Being above all honest, he had a phenomenal instinct for that quality in others. And he had a personal warmth and sweetness that could evoke those sometimes timid qualities in all whom he knew and accepted.

There was something about Frank Merlo that would not accept the un-true, that immediately and instinctively rejected whatever was contrary to his practically infallible sense of truth in people. He was a man to whom you would go for the interpretation of whatever was obscure to you in the quality of anyone you knew, because he knew them better than you did.

He was a giving person, always giving of himself and whatever he owned. The generosity of his heart, and its gift for understanding, made him superior to us in a way he probably never knew.

He had the kind of pride which is nobility and it was never broken once by the illness that had ended his living, visible presence. Those of us who knew him during his nine months' approach to life's end, all wonder how it was possible for any man living, who loved and understood living as amazingly well as Frank did could retain, as he went to his death, such a never-breaking vitality.

The afternoon of the day when he died, visitors to his hospital room found him sitting up in a chair. He would return to his bed for a few moments, and then go back to the chair, but he said nothing of pain or fear, he only said, "I feel restless."

One time on a two-motor plane flying over high mountains, one of the plane's engines suddenly failed. His companion, as the plane lost altitude steadily over the mountain range on its way back to its point of departure, found it necessary to wash down two pills with the contents of a pocket flask of whiskey in order to endure the apparently imminent prospect of crashing in flames. But Frank sat quietly reading his book, after saying casually, "Oh, I've flown back over the South Pacific, after a bombing mission, on a four-motor bomber with only one of two motors working a lot of times, and made it home safe. Drink? No, I don't want a drink. There's nothing to worry about."

And it was the proudly unafraid face of his companion that kept Frank's friend from giving in to his panic, not the medications and the liquor, but that seemingly casual reassurance and that seemingly calm concentration on the book that he held before his beautifully, strongly cut face.

As an epigraph to the poem of Frank's life and death, his plane companion, over mountains and oceans, can think of none more suitable than Stephen Spenders' line: "I think continually of the truly great."

MARIE DEMAIO WATCHES OVER GOGLIARDO HOMESTEAD

Vincent Gogliardo met his wife Margaret in the Little Italy section of New York City. They moved to 532 Fourth Avenue in the Peterstown section of Elizabeth, NJ in 1924 and raised five children, John, Marie, Joseph, Patrick and Rocco. Marie married Sal DeMaio and continued to live in the Fourth Avenue home, raising eight children of their own, Margaret, Marie, Rosario (Ross), Vincent (Jimmy), Carmella, Rose, Sal Jr. and Anthony.

Sal worked for the Union County Parks Department. Though Sal passed away in 1941 at the young age of 38, he left a wonderful legacy. The DeMaio family was an intricate part of life in Peterstown. Marie and Sal had twenty-three grandchildren and over 30 great-grandchildren, and counting. Marie did an outstanding job raising the family through the hardship of losing her husband. She was actually pregnant with Anthony when Sal died.

Marie and her siblings were involved in keeping their fathers devotion to St. Rocco by helping him organize an annual street procession and festival.

Marie died in 1992 but the homestead is still in the family. Her son, Anthony, who is a construction contractor, had beautifully renovated the home in a few years prior to her death. He added space for his sister Margaret who moved in and cared for their mom. Anthony kept intact the St Rocco Shrine that his grandfather built in 1945 which is visible through a window from the sidewalk. 🙏

Submitted by Jim Fodera, Treasurer of The Ribera Italian American Club of Elizabeth, NJ.

Jim Fodera answered the question that is inevitably asked when a photo of a cucuzza appears, "What do you do with that?" Jim gives a sicilian version of a stew that uses the elongated Italian squash. Folks from other towns put their own bent on the recipes, but they pretty much end up the same consistency. Jim offered two other recipes that can be made simply from what is grown in a home garden. These dishes make great appetizers.

NOTE: Quantities and proportions may be whatever the cook wishes depending on personal preference and how many people are being fed. Just add a good loaf of bread and they can become a meal.

CROSS STREET GANG

Cross Street in Elizabeth, NJ is the next street over from Elizabeth Avenue, just north of the border of the Peterstown section of town, behind the Royal Theater. The one block long street tapped into the area called Union Square. A Firehouse anchored one corner and Harmonia Bank stood at the point. The social club, The Union Pleasure Circle, sat in the middle of the block. The tight knit group of neighbors still attempt to keep in touch.

Al Vardalis moved to Cross Street in 1936 at the age of nine. He wrote about Cross Street in "My Life, My Story", a memoir that he penned in 2001 and dedicated to his children. The story included a detailed account of growing up in Elizabeth along with his time growing up in Kenilworth, through his military service and career in law enforcement in Westfield.

There are many references that Al makes that cross over to Peterstown, people he mentions, the stores, and schools. The open-air produce market in Peterstown rubbed up to Union Square. Al's mother's sister, Anna Jannucci and husband Louie, owned Jannucci's Meat Market next door to the Royal Theater on the 800 block of Elizabeth Avenue. Colton's Drug Store and Dietrich's bakery were nearby. Al attended St. Anthony's Church and served as an altar boy.

Tony Conte was one of Al's teachers and his brother Lenny was one of his best friends and still maintains contact with him in Punta Gorda, Florida.

Al Vardalis was born in Kenilworth, his father was born in Athens, Greece and his mother was born near Naples, Italy. His parents met during World War II when his mother was employed by a Kenilworth factory that manufactured ammunition and his father was in the U.S. Army assigned to plant security. After the war Al's father became a Kenilworth Police officer. He became ill and died at the early age of 39.

Al's story goes into deep detail about his life in Kenilworth. He shares great stories of friendships, especially one with Johnny Benitati. The reader can sense that Al left something special in Kenilworth but he went on to find something just as special on Cross Street in Elizabeth.

Over the years Al and his friends who grew up around Cross Street organized a get-togethers, the first meeting was in 1976 at the Ramada Inn in Clark, NJ. There hasn't been a meeting lately but the spirit of the gang still exists.

(right) Al in the U.S. Navy during WWII in 1945 at 17 years old.

EXCEPT FROM "MY LIFE, MY STORY"

By Al Vardalis

I was born on March 1, 1927 in the small town of Kenilworth, New Jersey. My mother, Alice, was born near Naples, Italy and my father, Alfred was born in Athens, Greece. They met each other during World War I when my mother was employed at a Kenilworth factory that manufactured ammunition, and my father was in the U. S. Army assigned to that plant for security. I had a brother, Ernest, who was five years older than me.

After World War I ended, and in 1921, my father and mother married. They settled in Kenilworth and my father became a police officer in that borough. He subsequently became chief of police and had an interesting career in law enforcement. Unfortunately, he became ill and died in 1933 at the age of 39.

My mother was a widow left with two young boys. I was five years old and my brother Ernie was ten when my father died. My mother was unable to work because we were too young, and it was very difficult for her to make ends meet on a police pension of $83.00 a month. In 1937, as we were in the midst of the Great Depression, my mother found it impossible to make payments on our home, and the mortgage company found it necessary to foreclose, forcing us to move out of the house. My mother's sister, my Aunt Anna Jannucci, owned several homes on Cross Street in Elizabeth, New Jersey and offered to rent one to us very reasonably.

While Ernie and I found it very upsetting to move to the "city" we knew it had to be done. We adjusted to city life quickly.

Growing up in Elizabeth was quite an experience for a young boy like myself who was raised in a small town. I was then about twelve or thirteen years old. Much of our spare time was spent going to Elizabeth Avenue with friends, and trying to identify the year and make of the cars riding by. That's how we occupied most of our time after school. We got pretty good at it, and to this day I remember the make and year of many of the cars when I see those antiques today! Especially the 1929 and 1930 Model A Ford which had an engine noise that could be distinguished from any other car on the road!

Our three-room apartment was on the first floor of a two-family house. It was a cold-water flat and had a stove in the kitchen used for both cooking and heating. Any hot water used for cooking or bathing had to be heated on the coal stove. It certainly was cold there in the wintertime! We used to love putting orange or tangerine peels on the hot stove as they gave off a nice smell when they burned. In a year or so, we moved up the street to another house that was a little better. It, too, was a two-family house and we lived on the first floor. The Arcure's lived on the second floor.

Paul Arcure and I became very good friends. Angelo Cordi lived next door and we also became good friends. Nunzio Mariano lived around the corner on Elizabeth Avenue and Al Beck lived a block away on Martin Street. The Travis family lived next door.

There seemed to be more opportunity to do foolish things in the city, like hitching on the back of trucks as they stopped at a traffic light on Route 1 running through Elizabeth. We would ride on the back of the truck until the driver became aware that we were there then we jumped off and hitched another ride on a truck returning to Elizabeth. We also hitched rides on freight trains as they stopped in the freight yard along East Grand Street and sometimes rode them to Philadelphia or towns south. Then we would hitch another train to return to Elizabeth. If my mother ever found out about those rides I would have been in real trouble with her!

My brother Ernie owned a motorcycle when we lived on Cross Street, and when he went into the Army Air Corps during World War II, he left the motorcycle to my cousin Charlie Vitale. Charlie taught me how to ride it, even though I was too young to get a driver's license. This experience would serve me well in later life.

I also belonged to St. Anthony's Church in Peterstown section of Elizabeth and became an altar boy. I would get up around 6 a.m. on certain mornings, walk about six blocks to the church and serve mass with the priest. At the end of the mass, I would then walk to elementary school on Jacques Street. I also received my Confirmation at St. Anthony's Church when I was fourteen years old. My cousin Charlie Vitale sponsored me as my Godfather. I can remember the pocket watch he gave me at Confirmation time. It was my first watch and I treasured it.

In 1942, when I was 14 years old, Al Beck, Joe Triano and myself took our .22 rifles to the Meadows, near Division Street where Wakefern Shoprite is presently located, and adjacent to Newark Airport. It was all open country then, and game animals such as rabbits were abundant. While tracking a rabbit, Al Beck shot at it and missed, somehow hitting me instead. The bullet entered my left side and lodged near my hip bone. Joe Triano took the guns home and Al took me to Alexian Brothers Hospital on East Jersey Street. The attending physician in the emergency room pushed a wire into the bullet hole to determine how deep it penetrated. When I asked him if he could remove the bullet right then and there so that my mother would not find out about it, he told me that it was a job for surgery. I then passed out and woke up in a hospital bed. I guess the shock finally set in. Of course the doctor called the police who came to the hospital to interview me. I told the detective that I did not know who shot me. Whether he believed me or not, nothing further was done about it. Al went to my house and told my mother that I had been shot, and that I was in the Alexian Brothers Hospital. When she and my brother Ernie came into the hospital ward, I could see that she had been crying and was very upset. When she saw that I was all right, and that I was sitting up eating ice cream, she looked so relieved! I got a real scolding from her but I could tell she was happy that I was alive! It wasn't until about 35 years later that she found out that Al Beck was the one that shot me.

The section of the city where I lived was in the area covered by Cleveland Junior High School, but as that school was overly crowded at the time, I was sent to Lafayette Junior High School. It was much further away from my house and quite a long walk. There were no busses to take us and it was several miles away. Well, we didn't mind the walk. There was a viaduct that crossed over Route 1 near the Holy Rosary Church and we used to walk across the ledge on the viaduct, balancing ourselves while the cars below traveled on the heavily-traveled road beneath. My mother never knew about that one!

Some of the friends I met at Lafayette were Joe Postizzi, who later became the municipal court judge in Clark, New Jersey. Another was Don Newcombe who became a star pitcher for the old Brooklyn Dodgers baseball team. Sal Serago, another friend, became a police officer in Elizabeth. Junior high school was enjoyable and I made many friends. I was graduated in 1941 and then went to Thomas Jefferson High School in September of 1941. World War II began that December and it would drastically change our lives. The class of 1941 was the first class to enter and leave during wartime (1941-1944). Lenny Conte, a classmate and good friend, would remain a close friend in the years to come. Jefferson was an all-boys high school and we were very anxious to enter the military service, even though the casualty lists were long. As I was only seventeen years old, I needed my mother's consent to volunteer for the military. She would not give her consent and insisted that I finish high school first, and only then would consider giving her consent for me to enter the navy.

When I approached my eighteenth birthday on March 1st, my mother had no choice and gave me her consent to list in the navy, reporting to Sampson Navel Training Center in New York. My long-time friend Johnny Beninati, from Kenilworth, was also at Sampson at the same time. 🐾

RIBERA CLUB CELEBRATES 85th YEAR WITH GRAND OPENING OF CULTURAL CENTER

On September 21, 2008 the Ribera Italian American Club will be cutting the ribbon officially opening the doors of its new cultural center. The beautiful two-story building was built at 412-416 Palmer Street, next to the Peterstown Community Center in Elizabeth, NJ.

The cultural center houses the organizations new clubhouse along with a game room, a cafe and a meeting hall that can be used for social events. There is also an outdoor patio with a brick oven. The clubhouse used to be located at 620 Third Avenue, on the corner of John Street.

The 4,000 square foot center was self-contracted by the club; designed and built through the construction expertise of members, in particular, Steve Bongiovi and Enzo Logiudice and architect Jimmy Guerra.

2008 also marks the 85th Anniversary of the Ribera Club, which was formed in 1923 by Italian immigrants from the town of Ribera, located on the Island of Sicily.

For the past few years the site has been the location of the clubs annual community picnic. The club also plans to use some space for classrooms to preserve Italian culture to future generations through language and history classes. The Ribera Club already raises money for scholarships each year through an annual dinner dance.

The entire Peterstown community is invited to attend the grand opening festivities.

THINK GREEN AND SAVE GREEN

According to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency the average American household spends $1,500 annually on energy bills -- a number that may go up a significant percentage this year due to rising costs of fuel. Almost half of that energy goes to heating and cooling your home. Lighting and appliances represent about a quarter and home electronic products like computers, TVs and cell phone chargers take a significant and growing share of what is left. Windows and doors are the most significant source of heat transfer in a home, regardless of climate or season.

In today's economy, it is essential to conserve energy, not only for cost purposes but also for environmental reasons. Energy efficient windows are designed so that heat is kept inside the home in winter and outside the home in summer. This reduces heating and cooling costs and minimizes energy consumption that impacts the environment.

In recent years, windows have undergone a technological revolution. It is now possible to significantly reduce solar heat gain and improve comfort while providing clear views and daylight. For example, installing double-glazed low-solar-grain windows instead of single-pane windows in a typical 2,000 square foot house would reduce the air condition peak load from 600 kw to 400 kw, which reduces the size of the necessary air condition from 5 tons to 3.5 tons. This difference in window performance would save the home owner about 35% in cooling costs.

With fuel costs rising, there is no better time to think of replacement windows than now. Energy saving home improvements like replacement windows, insulated siding and vented roofs simply pay for themselves in fuel cost savings.

The beautification and increased value of your home are added benefits to the savings. Homeowners are encouraged to act sooner than later. Material costs have been rising monthly at an unpredictable rate. There is a significant advantage to getting an estimate on home improvements today.

Call Joe Percario today at 908-245-1071 and ask how he can cut your energy bills and beautify your home with custom-fit, energy efficient windows.

All estimates are free with no obligation. 📞

LANDSCAPE AND GARDEN CENTER TAKES ROOT

Landscapers and homeowners traditionally would have to drive out to the western suburbs of Union County for landscaping and garden supplies. It was a costly trek that ate up valuable time and now even more valuable fuel. On June 1st of 2008 Union County Landscape and Garden Center opened its doors at 1455 St. Georges Avenue in Roselle to service the industry closer to home.

The location sits at the borders of Elizabeth, Linden and Roselle. The area is rich with landscapers and home improvement contractors who now have a convenient source for supplies and materials. The customers at UC Landscape & Garden Supply expressed relief that they no longer had to make the hour long round trip for material. The cost of fuel and man-hours sometimes cost more than the purchase. They also found the prices at UC Landscape were lower than they were used to paying.

The need for the supply center came from experience of the three owners of businesses in the building industry, Jim Palermo of PJS Contracting, Vinny Pace of Pace Trucking, and Ruben Milanes. The property which is 100' x 300' was a perfect fit for the new venture. For many years, it was the home of While-U-Wait, a company specializing in car radio and sound systems. While-U-Wait was owned by Vinny DeGeorgio and Joe LaRocca, life long friends of the new owners also hailing from the Peterstown section of Elizabeth.

In a way, the business is a family affair. Palermo and Pace are cousins. Jim being the son of Samone Palermo who started his excavating business, PJS Contracting, in 1958. Vinny is the son of Samone Pace who started his trucking company in 1958 also. Prior to that both Samones, who were first cousins, were partners in a business from 1955. Vinny continues to run his fathers Trucking Company.

Jim is the grandson of Leonardo Palermo who was the brother of Margaret (Palermo) Pace, Vinny's grandmother. The Palermo family arrived from Ribera Italy and settled in Peterstown.

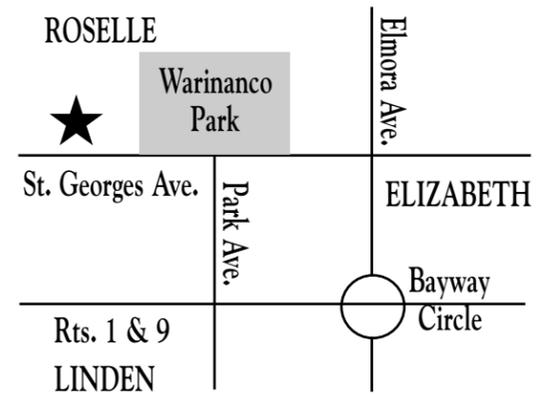

After one month in business, the Supply Center has shown that the owners were correct in their needs assessment. They have filled a niche for a steady stream of landscaping companies large and small, along with individuals with smaller needs.
